Fairytaleland News

FAIRYTALE MURDERS KINGDOM IN CHAOS OVER BIZARRE ACCIDENTS.

Beloved 5th dwarf Grumpy has been killed as a result of a cave-in at the mining facility where he worked. Luckily, dwarfs 1 through 4 and dwarfs 6 and 7 were all finished for the day. It is unknown why Grumpy was working so late at night.

Foul play suspected.

Grumpy presumed dead. Seen here; entrance to mine completely collapsed.

A freak accident occurred when Pinocchio fell into the kindling making assembly line at the Stiltskin wood mill. It is unknown why the puppet was visiting the mill. He is survived by his maker Geppetto.

Although Pinocchio was found in many pieces, his nose and shoes were visible within the kindling stack, helping authorities make a positive identification.

Contributing writer: B.B. Wolf

Foul play suspected.

BOOKSALES BOTTOM OUT. TOURISM DOWN 82%

Due to the mysterious deaths of Grumpy and Pinocchio, tourism in Fairytaleland has dropped off.

Book sales have ended, forcing many in the retail industry to request aid.

The Stiltskin Corporation has filed for bankruptcy due to the City Council's decision to cancel the restoration of Snow White's castle. As a result, the company's shares in diamond mining, milling and hay production, have completely bottomed out.

AN EMERGENCY CITY COUNCIL MEETING HAS BEEN CALLED!

Open letter to the editor: Fairytaleland has fallen into a dark decline. Could it be we are seeing greater evil because we have lost our moral compass? Until the citizens of Fairytaleland clean up their act, I am sure more fairytale characters will perish. A concerned citizen, Frog.

PRINCE CHARMING MISSING!

Last seen riding his horse Astor, across town. Strangely absent were his henchman and bodyguards. If anyone has any information leading to the return of Charming, please report it to the King. A reward is being offered.

Foul play suspected.
